Summary of Teach in Chongqing

Chongqing, also pronounced as Chungking (['tʃuŋ'kiŋ]), is one of the biggest cities in Southwest China. It gained the name 'Mountain city' for it lies in the mountains. It has a long history dating back to the Xia Dynasty. The name Chongqing means 'Double-Blessed' in Chinese. The name was given in 1189 (Southern Song Dynasty). At the time of the Anti-Japanese War, it was the capital of Nationalist China.

From 1954, Chongqing was part of Sichuan province before being designated as one of the only four municipalities directly under the central government, together with the other three cities, namely Beijing, Shanghai and Tianjin. Resultantly, it was hugely expanded in terms of land and population, and has been developing at a dramatic speed since then.
